JESSE JAMES AGAIN

Three Alma Merchants Robbed In One Week

It seems that Alma is being visited by a siege of amateur Jesse James stunts, the same as St. Louis experienced a few months ago. One week ago last Saturday night some presumably local talent burglars made their way into Eckert's meat market via the back way by breaking open three doors. The cash register was opened, and about two or three dollars in change was abstracted. The person or persons were evidently extremely nervous or else very inexperienced as they left ten dimes in a back compartment, which had been saved because of the mint mark, and also left about seventy-five cents in pennies. No meat was missed. Last Saturday night Ellison's grocery store was entered. The thieves only got as far as the cellar as the trap door was nailed down. They broke the trap on the cellar door. The same night Bartley's meat market was entered by the back door, the lock being broken and the inner door being pried open with a pair of ice tongs, the cash register was tinkered with, and the marauder pushed the key, locking the drawer, and it was not opened.
